The mission of the National Center for Education in Maternal and Child Health is to provide national leadership to the maternal and child health community in three key areas—program development, policy analysis and education, and state-of-the-art knowledge—to improve the health and well-being of the nation's children and families. The Center's multidisciplinary staff work with a broad range of public and private agencies and organizations to develop and improve programs in response to current needs in maternal and child health, address critical and emergent public policy issues in maternal and child health, and produce and provide access to a rich variety of policy and programmatic information.

Established in 1982 at Georgetown University, NCEMCH is part of the Georgetown Public Policy Institute. NCEMCH is funded primarily by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services through the Health Resources and Services Administration's Maternal and Child Health Bureau.

Supplement to the Community Awareness Survey

This publication contains an 18-question telephone survey and its results. The survey includes questions about residence, awareness of the HS program, participation in HS, educational achievement, age, marital status, racial/ethnic background, and income. The results section contains an introductory statement and a problem statement; an explanation of the methods, survey development, procedure, results, and discussion; and recommendations. The supplement describes the oversampling of 10 census tracts in the HS project area. It was believed that because of the random selection of households in the target area, these census tracts were not fully represented in the original survey. The methodology used for this oversample was identical to that used in the original survey.

Boston's 1997 Infant Survival Summit Report

This 22-page report includes proceedings from the second Boston Infant Survival Summit that was held on June 10, 1997. The first summit was held in 1990. Its purpose was to develop a plan to reduce the high infant mortality rate in Boston. While progress had been made since 1990 to reduce the number of infants dying in Boston, significant concerns persist (i.e., the fact that the ratio of black infant deaths to white infant deaths is 2.5 to 1, the lack of support services for high-risk women, etc.). The 1997 summit addressed these concerns through speeches and discussions by elected officials, public health leaders, and HS personnel. A summary of introductory comments, the keynote speech, comments from two panel discussions, and closing statements are included in this document.

Flint Healthy Start Initiative Overview

This document provides general information about the Flint HS Initiative. The Mott Children's Health Center, in collaboration with the Genesee County Health Department's Programs for Reducing Infant Deaths Effectively (PRIDE) Coalition and other community partners make up the Flint HS Initiative. The overall goal of the initiative is to delay early sexual activity and promote positive maternal and child health outcomes for African-American adolescents in the city of Flint. Flint HS works to meet these goals by using the adolescent and consortium models. The programs it offers include the "Go for Greatness" program for fifth-grade girls (see Unique number 22-4-2), the "Girls on the Edge of Greatness" program (see Unique number 22-4-1), and the "Moms on the Edge of Greatness" program.

Doña Ana Healthy Start

This 60-second PSA uses a mother and a child to promote the programs and services of Doña Ana HS. A mother speaks about the home visits, breastfeeding information, and nutrition information she received when she became involved in HS. In addition, she discusses the well baby visits she participated in and the WIC, health insurance, and housing information that was provided to her. The PSA also identifies Doña Ana HS community partners, such as the Maternal and Child Health Council of Doña Ana County. The 60-second PSA was recorded on a compact disk.

Tulsa Healthy Start Good Choices=Great Beginnings

This videotape includes an overview of Tulsa HS and four PSAs. The overview, which is 9 1/2 minutes long and is called "Today's Babies Are Tomorrow's Leaders," provides information about the seven models Tulsa HS has adopted to fight infant mortality in the community. These models include (1) consortium, (2) outreach/client recruitment, (3) care coordination/case management, (4) education/training, (5) facilitating services, (6) adolescent services, and (7) enhancing clinical services. Each of the four PSAs, which are designed to be broadcast in Northeast Oklahoma, is targeted to a specific audience. The first PSA addresses family planning. The second emphasizes the importance of good prenatal care. The third reminds women and families about the importance of infant care and well baby visits. The fourth is a call to reduce infant mortality in Oklahoma.

Entry into Prenatal Care—United States, 1989–1997

This article summarizes the results of a study conducted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) to examine the barriers to obtaining prenatal care (PNC) and the trends associated with delayed entry into PNC. Using 1989–1997 birth certificate data for all 50 states and the District of Columbia, as well as 1997 Pregnancy Risk Assessment Monitoring System data for 13 states, the CDC discovered that although more women are obtaining early PNC, racial/ethnic disparities and other barriers to PNC still exist. South East Asian Regional Community Health (SEARCH)—Community Health Advocates Training Guidebook

This guidebook is a product of the Community Health Advocate training program sponsored by South East Asian Regional Community Health (SEARCH). The goal of SEARCH is to increase the use of maternal and child health services among Cambodian, Chinese, Hmong, Laotian, and Vietnamese refugees and low-income immigrants in Toledo and Columbus, OH, and Detroit, MI. SEARCH community health advocates are community volunteers who provide health services information and referrals to Southeast Asian women and children. Although this guidebook was specifically designed to train SEARCH community health advocates, the information it contains can be adapted to meet any trainer's needs. The guidebook is divided into three parts: a trainers' orientation, training modules, and references. The purpose of the orientation section is to ensure that all health advocates provide consistent information. The nine training modules include detailed lesson plans and are presented from the perspective of an American trainer addressing an Asian audience. The reference section provides a resource list and bibliographies of related material.
